RIVER AND STEAMBOAT MATTERS.

The river was again rising yesterday, and last evening there were 6 feet 5 inches water in the canal and 41 feet in the pass on the falls. The weather continues very pleasant. The thermometer yesterday stood at 78 in the shade.

The Mississippi at St. Louis was falling on Friday with eight feet water in the channel to

The T. C. Twichell .- The departure of this steamer has been postponed till this evening, when she will positively leave. She is an exellent boat and has fine officers. Capt. Fawsett is her commander, and Mr. Fuller presides at the

The Rainbow .- This is the day on which the Rainbow takes her departure for Evansville and Henderson. She has always a full compliment of passengers. Her accommodations, table, and speed, are unexceptional.

The Harrison Bridges leaves for Green river this evening from the city wharf.

We are indebted to the clerk of the Belle Quigley for a copy of the boat's manifest.

day. She made a trial trip yesterday, and perbuilders. The Missouri is a difficult and dangers river to navigate, and none but boats of the strongest class can safely navigate it. Captain Draffen has paid particular attention to this in having her built.

The Carrier is merely intended as a freight pat, but she has nevertheless a neat cabin, and immediately back of it an apartment for passengers which may be termed a second-class cabin.

Her dimensions are as follows: length of hull 200 feet, beam 33 feet, and depth of hold 6 feet. Her draught light is less than 2 feet, and she can carry a large freight. The hull was built by Messrs. Howards, of Jeffersonville. Her machinery, built by Glover, Ainslie, & Co., of this city, consists of two engines, of 7 feet stroke, and cylinders 21 inches in diameter .-She has two of the largest kind of boilers, and a doctor. The cabin was built by Messrs. Mc-Claran & Cogshell, and the blacksmithing was done by Billings & Co. Messrs, Briner, Porter, & Co. executed the painting, which is remarkably well done. The upholstery came from the establishment of Mrs. Devinney, the carpets, &c., from John Simm. The whole boat reflects credit on her designer, Capt. Draffen, and those who constructed and furnished

The R. M. Patten arrived last night with a tolerably good freight. We are indebted to Mr. Pope, her clerk, for a copy of the manifest. She will probably leave on Saturday.

The steamers Tishomingo going up the river and Fanny Fern going down, came in collision yesterday between this city and Henderson.—
The latter boat made a narrow escape from destruction, and was considerably injured anyhow. The other boat had her stem iron knocked off, has received no serious damage. We did not understand whether awkwardness or careessness was the cause. The collission occurred in open day.

Mr. of extensive cultivation. Ford has already displayed such talent in the fields of literature, that he has won a fame of which a veteran literateur might be proud. His admirable critical essay on De Quincy is a production of rare merit, and gives noble promise of a high career for its author.

Let our readers remember that the exhibition of the Mechanics' Institute opens to-night, and Mr. Ford's address will be made at half-past 7

Mr. A. G. Fitzhugh, the agent of the Board of Directors of the Washington Monument at our national capital, desires us to state that he will attend all the agricultural fairs yet to be held during this fall in Kentucky, for the purpose of soliciting contributions for the monument. He desires also to acknowledge the receipt from the treasurer of the Southwestern Agricultural and Mechanical Association of the amount collected by them for the monument at their last annual fair. Boxes for voluntary contribution will be placed at the fair grounds of the Southwestern Agricultural and Mechanical Association during their fair soon to be held, and also at the exhibition hall of the Mechanics' Institute during their present annual exhibition. It is scarcely necessary for us to do more than to remind the citizens of Kentucky of this opportunity of aiding the erection of this memorial of a grateful nation to the venerated father of his country. The psesent Board of Directors of the monument are actively engaged in pushing forward the work, and are calling upon their countrymen to furnish them with the means to prosecute it steadily to a speedy completion.

We say that any one who asserts or intimates that we counselled or advised that gangs should take the polls and knock down, beat, mangle, and chase away legal voters, tells an abominable lie-a lie without one fig-leaf of truth to cover its beastly nakedness.

Map of Nashville .- We are indebted to Messrs. Hart & Mapother, civil engineers, for a beautiful chart of the city of Nashville. Messrs. H. & M. are the gentlemen who have published the excellent map of our own city.

The Agricultural Association rented eleven of their booths on the fair grounds yesterday, with the privilege to the lessee to furnish the dinner during the fair, at $800.

DEATH BY DROWNING .- Coroner White held The other boat had her stem iron knocked off, thas received no serious damage. We did not understand whether awkwardness or careessness was the cause. The collission occurred in open day.

The steamship Washington sailed from Southampton for New York on the 12th, and the America from Liverpool to Boston on the 15th. The latter will be due at Halifax to-day.

DEATH BY DROWNING.—Coroner White held an inqueat on the body of a man found floating in the river near the foot of Clay street. From appearances he had been in the river but a few days. He was about five feet six inches high and heavy set. His hair was slightly gray. He had on a heavy gray coat with a large patch on the back, blue corded pants patched on the right knee, and a white shirt. As there were no marks of violence, the jury rendered a verdict according to the above facts.

> Lagrange Peach .- This is a famous large, white, free-stone peach. The specimens received were grown upon rather flat, moist land, which we think causes in the fruit an astringent, bitter character, but upon high dry land it is one of the finest peaches of the season.

> Hart's Pippin .- This is said to be a seedling apple, and is from the farm of Col. W. P. Hart, of Woodford county, Ky. It is of the Pippin family. Fruit large; skin greenish yellow. Flesh remarkably fine grained, with a rich juicy flavor. This apple is so tender when ripe that it will burst open in falling from the tree. We think it much superior to the true Fall Pippin, which is sufficient praise for any apple.

Mr. Isaac Lewis, of Hopkinsville, has sent us a package of apples of extraordinary beauty. Size large; skin exceedingly smooth and of the most beautiful red, deepening in shade on the sunny side. Quality good, but hardly first-rate, they having become considerably wilted before they came to hand. The name is entirely unknown to us.

An AUTOBIOGRAPHY.
In one duodecimo volume, neath bound in cloth. Price $1.

THE author of this interesting American novel is among the most intellectual of living writers. It tequired the genius of the author to have grasped, with such extraordinary force, the scenes and circumstances through which her story moves. No other writer could have thrown as strong an individual life into place and locality. Her passionate fearless nature, her wild warm heart, are transfused into the magic world she has created, with such an intense earnestness, when no one can enter without yleiding to the irresistible fascination of her powers. The book is a thrilling transcript of undoubted experience. The characters introduced into her work are flesh and blood realities. These graphic life revelations have created a profound literary sensation not equaled by any other production since the appearance of the "Scarlet Letter" and "Jane Eyre," and are "more talked about than any other novel of our times.

WHEAT—Thin Sowing.—Thin sowing of wheat may be profitably pursued on soils which have been thoroughly sub-soiled and underhave been thoroughly sub-soiled and under-drained, but cannot succeed with certainty in shallow-ploughed land with a compact sub-soil. The causes of this difference may be thus under-As soon as wheat has grown to its first joint a new set of roots appear, called tillers, which travel horizontally for a time and throw which travel norizontally for a time and throw up new shoots, and thus a single grain of wheat, with full tillering, may furnish one hundred stalks, each of which will armitself with proper roots for descent in a well disintegrated soil; and if the soil be deeply and properly prepared, as suggested above, it would be difficult to ascertain which is the original shoot and which has arisen from tillering. In shallow ploughed land, with a sub-soil not disintegrated, and particularly if wet, the tillering will discontinue as scon as any one root from the stool shall reach the surface of the sub-soil. These will turn brown and no new tillering will afterwards occur. It is for this reason that thin sowing will not answer on badly prepared soils, and it is also for this reason that under-drained and sub-soiled meadows never man out for as fast as sub-soiled meadows never run out; for as fast as any stool or crown of roots be broken by the feet of the cattle, it must cease to tiller if any portion of the root is in contact with the subsol in a compact and cold state—but if it be free for root to travel in a proper degree of humidity, and freely percolated by atmosphere, new shoots will replace old ones, and thus the meadow is continually!renewed. Soil, so pregred before being put down to recommend the source of meadow is continually renewed. Soil, so pre-pared before being put down to grass as to insure these conditions, may be kept in grass for a century, by simply using such soluble top-dressings as can enter the soil in early spring with the early rains, so as to secure continued with the early rains, so as to secure continued tillering and fertilization. - Working Farmer.

TUESDAY EVENING, SEPT. 25, 1855.

ARE THE MANY WISER THAN THE FEW?-Mr. Bancroft delivered an oration before the New York Historical Society on the occasion of its late semi-centennial celebration, in which, addressing himself to the necessity of the progress of the race, he said:

The life of an individual is but a breath; it comes forth like a flower, and fleeth like a shadow. Were no other progress, therefore, possible than that of the individual, one age would have little advantage over another. But as every man partakes of the same faculties, and is consubstantial with all, it follows that the race also has an existence of its own; and this existence becomes richer, more varied, free, and complete, as time advances. Common sense implies, by its very name, that each individual is to contribute some share towards the general intelligence. The many are wiser than the few; the multitude than the philosopher; the race than the individual; and each successive age than its predecessor.

A writer in the Church Review, who criticises the entire oration very unsparingly, thus cavils at this particular passage:

But our special concern is with the sentence, "The many are wiser than the few; the multi-tude than the philosopher." This, we take leave to say, is, in any pertinent and reasonable view of the import of the language, sheer absurdity and untruth. It is one of that sort of utterances that always move our spleen—smart sayings, with a certain ringing tone in them, but as empty of truth as "the sounding brass and tinkling cymbal" are of "charity"—fine sentences, which, when grasped and subjected to a search-hich the alleged to a searching inquest, are obliged to collapse into drivel-ing platitudes in order to save the smallest fraction and semblance of meaning and truth. "The many are wiser than the few." What does he mean? Wisdom is a relative attribute when predicated of men. Some may have more of it, some less; some a great deal, some very little, some, possibly, none at all, or so little as to be ranked as unwise or foolish men. Does Mr. Bancroft mean that the number of wise men is greater than the number of foolish men? Perhaps it is. It is to be hoped it is. But that is not his meaning; it would reduce his sharp saying to a pointiess platitude. What does he mean, then? Who are "the few" that he has in his mind? Are they the comparatively ignorant and uncultivated? No. Are they the compara-tively instructed and cultivated? Yes. And who are "the many"? Are they the more in-structed? No. Are they the less instructed?

His utterance then resolves itself into the assertion that the ignorant many are wiser than the instructed few-which is either a flat contradiction or else a paradox. If taken as a contradiction, we need pursue the matter no fur-ther; if taken as a paradoxical utterance of a truth, we deny that there is any truth in it. On what ground can the ignorance or unwisdom of the many be pronounced wiser than the wisdom of the few? Is it that the less cultivated many are individually each wiser than any of the cultivated few? No. Is it that the collective wisdom of the many is greater than the collective wisdom of the few? That might be the case provided, in the first place, that the decisions or conduct of a collective body could be wiser than the wisdom of the individuals composing it-a thing likely to be when the water of a stream can continue to raise itself higher than its fountain; and, provided, in the second place, that wisdom were anything to be measured by bulk or weight. Under these two conditions, but not otherwise, this and the other utterances of this sentence-"the multitude wiser than the philosopher: the race than the individual"-may come to have some meaning and truth, instead of being, what they now are, absurdly untrue.

Now, undoubtedly, the perpetrator of this hypercriticism has very legibly written himself down an ass. He has clearly erected his whole tottering superstructure of sneer and cavil upon a stupid misapprehension of the accomplished thinker he assumes to chide. Mr. Bancroft, in the passage referred to, most unquestionably did not design to contrast the ignorant many with the cultivated few, as his splenetic rewiewer affects to think, but simply the totality lars, showing an increase over the valuation of great net-work of railroads which intersect the of humanity with its constitutive elements—the last year of fifteen millions three hundred and of humanity with its constitutive elements—the last year of fifteen millions three bundred and for it can have none. whole with its parts. He obviously meant only thirty-six thousand dollars. The rate of taxathat the sum of truth possessed by mankind in tion has been fixed at seventy-seven cents on its integrity surpasses that possessed by its one hundred dollars, a reduction of 15 cents wisest individuals-a proposition so plain that from last year. it might well be deemed a "pointless platitude" if the orator had not employed it as a familiar link in his demonstration rather than a striking oracle or as an oracle of any sort. The immediate point in question was the necessity of the progress of the race. To establish this necessity, Mr. B., among other arguments, forcibly maintained that the race has an existence of its own, made up of the existence of every individual of every one of its countless generations, and that this existence, like a majestic river flowing seaward, grows broader and fuller and more free and perfect in its energies as it presses forward toward the eternal shore. The sentence that has strangely moved the "spleen" of his critic merely asserts, as if in parenthesis, and by way of graceful emphasis, that this human tide is ever larger than its largest tributary rills. It is really but a rhetorical form-a figure of thoughtas innocent a sentence, indeed, as ever shipwrecked a critic. It is neither a contradiction nor a paradox nor anything that is absurd and untrue or that has the semblance of absurdity and untruth. It is just as little obnoxious to this stricture as the reviewer's own assertion that "some men have a great deal of wisdom, some very little," a "saying" that might easily have been "smart" if its author had known how to make it so. If Mr. Bancroft expresses himself in "fine sentences," it is only because he is a master of style and writes no other kind. The literary world will cheerfully forgive his critic whenever he chooses to sin in like man. ner. The whole thing is manifestly too trivial for a moment's grave attention. The reviewer thinks that the wisdom of a collective body will be "wiser than the wisdom of the individuals composing it," when the "water of a stream can contrive to raise itself higher than its fountain," He might as philosophically say that the properties of a compound will be higher could have produced that masterly instrument. entire faculty cannot rise above the wisdom of Jeffersonville railroad has fallen to one-third of richer than the treasures of Irving or of Longto raise itself higher than its fountain." EMINENCE FAIR .- The fifth annual fair of the Union Agricultural and Mechanical Association will be held on the 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th, and 6th days of October, at the fair grounds, near Eminence, Henry county, Ky.

The President of this association assures us that there will be a large number of imported premium cattle from Fayette and Bourbon counties, and we presume that every other interest will be well represented. Shelby and Henry are among the richest counties in Kentucky, and no portion of the State contains a more intelligent and enterprising set of farmers; we therefore expect this will be one of the best exhibitions in the State. We advise everybody to go to the Eminence fair.

Surrender of John Hancock .- Some time since an Abolitionist by the name of Hancock jumped the claim of a Missourian named Jones, who has since been appointed sheriff of Douglas K T., in which the city of Lawrence is situated, and declared he would hold it at the peril of his life; and in order to make good his assertion, summond his minions to his support, forty in number; Jones took with him fifteen of his friends, "Border Ruffians," and demanded their surrender. Hancock told him that he was proud say that he was a lineal descendant of the illustrious John Hancock, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and would never surrender. Jones then turned to his men and commanded them to bring their guns to bear upon the enemy, and then gave them thirty se-conds to give up the claim, in which time Han-cock "caved." When Jones sang out in a voice of thunder, "John Hancock, descendant of the illustrious John Hancock, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, do I understand you to say that you surrender?" Han-cock answered: "I want it distinctly understood that I surrender."-Independence Journal,

A Great Lumberman .- The greatest lumberman in America is William Price of Quebec. He has erected a wharf at river Du Loup, 120 miles below Quebec, at a cost of $120,000, to accommodate his lumber business. He is the most extensive dealer in North America; has 30 saws running near that place; 40 at St. John's Bay; 22 in constant operation at Ha-ha Bay, and at the Saguenay Rapids 10 more. He also purchases some millions of feet from the Otta-It is said he has furnished, for several years past, employment for from 2,000 to 3,000 men, and freighted over a hundred ships annually with lumber for European markets.

The receipts show a steady increase from the beginning, and I am informed ridiculous blunders. We advise this spitsire critic to husband his acumen and to let his "spleen" lie fallow.

The Agricultural Fair at Louisville.—
The time for holding our fair is near at hand, and we hope that all have made up their minds.

The time for holding our fair is near at hand, and we hope that all have made up their minds.

But another cause more radical and serious in its character can be presented, and that is that although this road begins at a proper point, and leads off in the right direction, it terminates at a country town of fifteen hundred inhabitants, instead of going to the capital of Indiana, a city of twenty thousand inhabitants. It gets almost within hearing of the roar of nearly a dozen railroads diverging to all parts of the State, and it stops among the cornfields. Here we have the great source of the trouble. If any stockholder wishes to put his finger on what hurts him, let him do so; there it is. Now for my part, as a stockholder, I would prefer that the good old men, who have always had this enterprise safely tucked under them, their taste for the country, would emigrate to the other end of the line, where they might, while ruminating on their past exploits, sweetly enjoy rural felicity and quiet, and exclaim with at such a proposition, and may pop up out of their seats, as doubtless they have many times Time was, when by the partial legislation of Indiana her trade was directed in an un-Cincinnati, were shut out from her borders, except by that circuitous avenue. And then it was that "the Madison road" was a mighty name in Wall street. But Cincinnati has built new routes to Indianapolis, and the glory of the Madison road has departed. Instead of lording it over all the roads in Indiana, little and big, there are none now so low as to do her reverence, except the Jeffersonville. This one she has systematically snubbed from the beginning. And now the Jeffersonville is only too happy to sneak in hindmost of all the roads, into the union depot at Indianapolis, hitched to the tail of a thing which has become an object of derision So I say that if the ghost of such a defunct concern should alarm those gentlemen in the manner that it always has heretofore, and Edinburgh should not be sufficiently quiet for their tender nerves, they might proceed up to Shelby-ville on their pet branch, where I am sure they will find quiet enough.

To do the acting president of the road justice, I believe that he has always been an advocate of the extension of the road to Indianapolis. And the result will prove that economy and enthe road cannot be extended to Indianapolis is a humbug. If the directory say so, they only establish their own incompetency. The Madison road is no rival of the Jeffersonville, because Madison is no rival of Louisville. renceburg road is the rival of the Jeffersonville road, because Cincinnati is the rival of Louis And while Louisville allows the enterprises of Cincinnati to be successful and permits her own to remain incomplete, she must acknowledge the superiority of her rival. Finish the road to Indianapolis; that is the true policy. Give the thing a head and a tail both, and not let one end be forever stuck down the throat of

AN ELEPHANT WORKING .- We passed an elephant working on the road, and it was most in-teresting to watch the half-reasoning brute; he was tearing out large roots from the ground by means of a chain and hook, fastened round his neck by a species of collar. He pulled like a man, or rather like a number of men, with a succession of steady hauls, throwing his whole weight into it, and almost going down on his knees, turning round now and then to see what progress he was making. Really the instinct displayed by the elephant in its state is little short of reason in its fullest sense. There is no doubt they do think, and also act apon experience and memory, and their capacity seems to increase in an extraordinary degree from their intercourse with man.

The remarkable nicety and trouble they take in squaring and arranging the blocks of hewn stone when building a bridge is incredible unless seen; they place them with as much skill as any mason, and will return two or three times to give the finishing touches when they think the work not quite perfect. They retire a few yards, and consider what they have effected, and you may almost fancy you can detect them turning their sagacious old noddles on one side and shutting one eye in a knowing manner to detect any irregularity in the arrangement. Sidney Smith's anecdotes of elephants' reason, in his lectures on moral philosophy, although most astonishing, do not fail for want of corroboration. Paid for Whipping a Boy .- A few days since, one of the drivers of a team used for hauling cars on the Market street railroad caught the son of a tavern keeper on one of the cars while it was in motion. He took the boy off and gave him several cuts with his whip. Several of the tavern keeper's neighbors saw the act and made quite a noise about it, and informed the father of the boy. He (the father) let on to be very indignant, and told them if they would show him the driver he would settle with him. him the driver he would settle with him. The driver was watched for, and when seen the fa-ther was informed of it. The team was stopped and the driver invited into the tavern and asked if he was the man that had struck the boy. "Yes," replied the driver, "and I shall do it again if I catch him on the cars." The indignant father put his hand violently in his pocket and drew out a dollar, which he gave the driver for the good service he had performed.

THE HIDDEN PATH, by Marion Harland. One elegant 12mo. Price $125.

The following notice of this work, which we find in the Richmond Enquirer: is doubtless from the generous pen of Mrs. Anna Coza Ritchie, and contains a just tribute to the literary teleant of the most successful female writer which Virginia has yet precinced.

"Let this noble production (we use the adjective in its fullest and the production of the sum of the season) lie upon the table, caliven the hearth, be the house-bold council of every true-hearted Virginian. Foster this gifted daughter of the South with the expanding sunshine of appreciation, the refreshing dews of praise—stimulate undeveloped genius, which has never yet 'penned its inspiration' to walk in her steps, emulate her achievements, and share her houors—let Virginia produce a few more such writers, and the cry that the South has no literature of its own is silenced forever! The Hidden Path is a work that North or South, East or West may point to with the finger of honest price and say 'Our daughter each this message to the world—pours this balm into wounded hearts—traces for wavering arring feet this Hidden Path which leads to the great goal of eternal peace."

BY TELEGRAPH.

Reported for the Bulletin.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 25.

New Orleans papers of Wednesday have been received. They contain details of a great storm on the lake coast which caused great dam-age. Several vessels were wrecked, houses prostrated, wharves washed away, and lives lost. Two men were killed at Mississippi City by falling off of a house; one was a son of Mr. Geo. W. Givens; the other was Mr. Jos. Prentice. They were merchants from New Orleans. The storm was more severe than any experienced since the year 1823.

Boston, Sept. 25. The freight car of the steamboat train on the Stonington railroad was burned this morning, with all its contents, including the New York newspaper mail.

In response to the notice in the papers of Friday last, a few citizens interested in establishing a Dispensary in the eastern part of the city met at the office of the Trustees of the Public Schools on Monday afternoon. Col. Wm. Duerson was called to the Chair and John P. Smith appointed Secretary.

The Chair stated that the object of the meeting was to put the Dispensary into immediate operation, and showed the advantages of such an institution, as an auxilliary to the relief and employment association, as also a means of keeping many persons and families out of the hospital and almshouse, by affording medical aid in the incipient stages of disease.

John P. Smith then moved that two medical gentlemen be appointed to take charge of the Dispensary and dispense the medicines, and that the Chair make the appointments, which was concurred in, and the Chair appointed Drs. Flint and Harding.

Mr. Coleman Daniel then moved that a collecting committee of three, together with a Treasurer, be appointed by the Chair, which motion prevailed, and the Chair appointed Drs. Cooke, Breckinridge, and Bartlett as the collecting committee, and Mr. T. L. Jefferson as Treasurer.

The meeting then adjourned to Friday afternoon, 4 o'clock, to meet at the same place. WM. DUERSON, President.

JOHN P. SMITH, Sec'y.

It is hoped that an immediate response will be made to the collectors, as nothing is wanted but the means to place the Dispensary in active

[Correspondence of the New York Commercial Advertiser.]

PARIS, Sept. 6. Rarely has a newspaper article produced an effect equal to that of the London Times upon the state of things at Naples. It encourages the inhabitants to revolution, and declares that every man in Western Europe will cry God-speed. This article was the universal topic of conversation yesterday at the Bourse. In case of the overthrow of the Neapolitan Bourbons, Prince Murat may be considered as their most proba-Murat may be considered as their most proba-ble successor. Insurrection is now possible at any moment in Lombardy, Rome, and Naples. Rome is offending France by its conduct toward her ally, Piedmont. The Austrians have fur-nished the West with motives enough for indif-ference toward the maintenance of their rule in Italy. The King of Naples is demented. In short, the condition of the peninsula is such, and such is the attitude of the great powers toward each other, that Italy may reasonably hope that a blow struck for her independence will now find both England and France willing to lend a hand. to lend a hand.

The books of the police show that the number of provincials and foreigners who may be supposed to have been brought to Paris by the visit of the Queen was no less than 741,345. If we place the expenditure of each individual during a stay of ten days, at the low average of $50, we arrive at a profit for Paris of over 37 millions. It is known that, for the jewelers, the week was more profitable than any whole year during the reign of Louis Philippe. Every branch of trade was immensely benefited, but none to a degree so enormous as this.

The stock of the Crystal Palace fell 26 francs during the month of August, notwithstanding the Queen's visit. It is now at 90, but it started at 170. The attendance is large, owing to the unseasonably cold weather, which renders the glazed roof rather comfortable than otherwise. About half the articles exhibited bear a ticket with the word Venden; while others, though unsold, have brought hundreds of orders to their owners. It is not probable the exhibition will remain open beyond the 1st of November.

From Berlin the latest news is, that the illness of the King of Prussia is becoming serious, and that he is afflicted with dropsy in the chest. Mr. Mason has left Paris for one of the watering places of Germany. He did not know when he started where he should stop or how long he should remain absent New Books! New Books at Ringgold's.

Braithwaite's Retrospect for July

Haithwaite's Retrospect for July. To medical men the great advantage offered by the Retrospect is pect is its embodying in a confined space all the cream of Medical periodicals, sparing them the labor of wading through many velumes filled with much trivial and uninteresting matter, which must be perused in order to reach what is realized to the perused in order to reach what is realized to the perused in order to reach what is realized to the perused in order to reach what is realized to the perused in the peruse of the which they may find precisely what they require in any of the scattered publications of the day. To families and private individuals it is scarcely less valuable than to the professional reader, since, although purely and in the highest degree scientific, its contents are yet presented in a style so simple and unaffected that they are comprehensible to any ordinary intellect. New Catholic Books.

"THE Studies and Teaching of the Society of Jesus at the time of its Suppression—1750—1753." Translated from the French of M. L. Abbe Maynard. We have just received a few copies of this new work, and we think many persons in this community might read it with great profit. "An Inquiry into the Principles of Church Authority, or Reasone for recalling my subscription to the Royal Supremacy." By the Rev. R. J. Wilberforce, M. A., late of the English Church ish Church.

"The Blessed Sacrament, or the Works and Ways of God."
By Frederick William Faber, D. D., author of "All for Jesus," "Growth in Holiness," & D., author of "All for Jesus," "Growth in Holiness," & D.

We have also received a few copies of "Butler's Book of the Roman Catholic Church," a work eminently suited to discouse the minds of the well-disposed in regard to the Temporal Power of the Pope and other equally absurd questions which have lately agitated the public mind.

BRAINARD BROTHERS.

Jacob's Block, 74 Fourth street, near Main.

The Parlor Grand is the very perfection of all Grand Pianos, and is particularly adapted to the wants of professors, amateurs, and others who may object to the great size of a Full Grand.

The unique and beautiful style of this instrument and its perfect fitness for the parler are commendations that will not apply to the ordinary Grand Plano. For, while it combines the tone, power, action, and appearance of a Full Grand, it has the delicate touch of Chickering's Square Planos, acknowledged by every one superior to any other, and, though of seven octave compass, is still smaller in size than the semi-Grand Plano of 6% octaves, as it occupies but little more space than a 7 octave Square Plano.

The peculiar and compact construction of the Parlor Grand, an invention of the late lamented Jonas Chickering, is a sure guarantee of its durability. And the complete success of this new and truly beautiful instrument fully sustains the reputation of its inventor and manufacturers.

We have already sold several of these instruments in this city, and, to meet the increased demand for them, have arranged for a constant supply.

To these superb Plano-Fortes we instrument on the Parlor Grand before purchasing.
